SOMEBODY HAS TO SAY NO.

One thread of the old net is left: the grey Veil at the edge of the world. And it is failing. Behind it, the Crowned are waking, nine hundred years asleep in the grey country, and the kindest of them is the most dangerous of all.

Oszric the Gilded King loves everyone. He only wants them safe. Everything he touches turns to gold: stopped, kept, forever, with the eyes still moving. And he has walked out into the world with his hands open.

Lex Vey is a father now, and his own father is running out of time. To keep the world from being kept, two brothers must cross into a country where one day costs ten at home, find the Key at the bottom of everything, and decide who will make its last turn.

Because whoever turns it goes with what it unwrites.
